Be a Little Sib!

Join PASU's Sib Families!

PASU's sib families connect incoming freshmen (little sibs) with upperclassmen (big sibs) of Filipino descent and/or interest in the Filipino culture. There are 3 main reasons why you should sign up to be one of PASU's little sibs!

1. Bombard your big sibs with questions regarding Stanford life!

Whether it is about what classes to sign up for, what sections to take, what campus events to look out for, and what opportunities to take advantage of, PASU's big sibs have the answer. They've been through them already!

2. Sick of dining hall food? Go on food runs with your big sibs!

Even though our university ensures that dining halls serve appetizing food, it can get bland after a while. Known for having big appetites for pho, Korean barbecue, Filipino food, and sushi, PASU's big sibs know where to find the best restaurants around Stanford. Even if you are just craving jasmine milk tea (boba!), your big sibs know how and where to take you!

3. Build lasting familial relationships with your big sibs and fellow little sibs!

PASU's sib families hang out many times throughout the school year. And since most members of the sib families participate in different PASU events, they get to know each other well. So even when the school year ends, the relationships formed stay strong and even last beyond their undergraduate careers.

"Responsibilities" of little sibs:

- Roll out to sib family events!
- Nicely nag your big sibs to organize outings for the family!
- Enjoy your status as little sibs while it lasts!

Keep in mind that it's not a requirement to be hugely involved in PASU to be a little sib. However, to fully experience the fun and love of the Filipino/Filipino-American community at Stanford, it is recommended that you participate in the wide range of activities that PASU holds throughout the year.
